FOUR PHYSICIANS TO CONSULT OVER THE QUINTUPLETS

"Spring Fever" Has Troubled Four of the Famous Babies

THOROUGH DIAGNOSIS

Father Charges Condition Is More Serious Than Generally Known

By Grace Proy (I. N. S. Special Correspondent)

CALLENDAR, Ontario, Apr. 23.—The Dionne quintuplets appeared likely to get a thorough medical going over today by four physicians called in for consultation concerning the "Spring Fever" which has troubled four of the famous babies.

According to Olivia Dionne, father of the quintuplets, Dr. Allen Ray had summoned Dr. Allen Brown, Toronto baby specialist, and another Toronto physician after receiving authority from Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, to bring medical men into consultation. Dionne added, he himself, acting on Hepburn's authority, also called in two other doctors. All four are expected to examine the babies during the day.

Dr. Dafee received permission to call in the other doctors following the request of Dionne, who charged their condition was much more serious than was generally known.

In a statement to International News Service, Dr. Dafee said he would have no objections if any eminent physicians were called in to examine the babies. He said all but Marie had virtually recovered from the illness and he expected her to be well in a day or two.

Fails to Stop After An Accident; Is Under Arrest

A resident of Bristol R. D. No. 2, is under arrest as the result of an accident on State Road, Bensalem Township, Sunday evening. The one in custody is George Walters, whom it is alleged sideswiped the car operated by James Cosmo, 2653 E. Summer street, Philadelphia.

It is alleged that Walters did not halt after the accident, and commandeering another car Cosmo followed Walters to his garage where he was later arrested. The accident occurred at 11:45, and the arrest took place at 12:55. At a hearing before justice of the peace Laughlin, Croydon, yesterday, Walters was held for a further hearing at seven o'clock Friday evening. He was released under $300 bail.

Both cars were considerably damaged. On each a tire blew out, and on Cosmo's machine the left front wheel was broken. The fender on Walters' car was also considerably damaged. It is stated by Constable Joseph Seaders that Walter admits that his was the car involved.

CHARGE SCHOOL BOYS WITH WRECKING HOME

Thirteen Placed Under Arrest and 28 Are Believed Involved

PARENTS MAY PAY BILL

PERKASIE, Apr. 23.—Thirteen of the 28 Perkaskie-Sellersville high school boys alleged to be involved in vandalism have been placed under arrest and more are expected to be arrested, before the investigation has been completed.

The boys are charged with wrecking the interior of a home on which $27,000 had just been spent for decorations and the case was heard by Justice of Peace, John W. Sprengel, here.

Meanwhile, parents of the boys have been advised by the magistrate to get together on a plan for reimbursing Robert Hendricks, Perkaskie dairyman, for the heavy expense that will be involved in making his palatial home opposite the Perkaskie-Sellersville school again fit to live in.

All but Conrad, who had suffered a fractured ankle, were present at the preliminary hearing on Saturday morning, when more than 200 persons jammed the borough hall to watch the proceedings.

Due to the seriousness of the damage done, the magistrate made no attempt to settle the case, but is placing it up to the parents, some of whom were present at the hearing.

The Hendricks home, just recently remodeled and elaborately decorated is located on a large tract of ground, set back from the highway, just opposite the school, on the Perkaskie-Sellersville boundary line. It was decorated along elaborate lines. Included in the decorations were several fireplaces, one of which cost $3,200; a sunken fish aquarium in the sun room, equipped with underwater lighting; bas-relief panels and hand painting taking the place of wall-paper; full length mirrors, some of which cost hundreds of dollars; large costly urns, and other appurtenances in keeping.

According to the testimony brought out at the hearing, the boys first broke into the house early in the month, and entered on several nights subsequently. In all, twenty-eight boys are said to have joined the "parties" in the mansion.

The wine cellar seemed to be the center of the boys' activities. They drank heavily from it, police say, and also wasted much of it. Out of the 200 electric lights in the house, the only one they did not smash was the one in the wine cellar.

Bas-relief panels were damaged, and wall paintings were torn so that they will have to be replaced. Images in the sunken fish aquarium were broken, and a $1,400 electric piano had been completely pulled to pieces. A 200-year-old century plant with three to four foot long fronds, and which had cost $800, was pulled apart, leaf by leaf.

Dozens of music rolls for the piano, which cost $2 to $2.50 each, were unrolled, torn, and thrown down the laundry chute into the basement. Candles were ripped off chandeliers, fixtures were torn down, and the ripped metal and broken glass were ground underfoot into the inlaid hardwood floors. A full-length, old mirror was smashed.

Half a dozen new suits of clothing Hendricks had stored in a moth-proof closet were taken out, ripped in pieces or tied in knots and scattered over the house.

Checks were taken out of a desk and scattered ankle deep over Hendricks' office, and a $5,000 bond which cannot be duplicated was stolen or destroyed, as was a $1,000 mortgage. A fountain pen was stolen. Business receipts were added to the litter in the office.

The caretaker discovered the damage and notified Hendricks who was

VISIT TO STATE CAPITOL AND THE SURROUNDING COUNTRYSIDE DURING EARLY SPRING PROVIDES AN INTERESTING TRIP, BOTH SCENIC AND EDUCATIONAL

Thousands of Visitors Attracted Annually to State Group of Buildings—Eight Excellent Roads Lead to Gates of Capital City—Countryside About That Section Attractive

This is the third of a series of articles by which the State Department of Highways is endeavoring to stimulate interest in touring in Pennsylvania.

The articles have been prepared under the direction of Warren Van Dyke, Secretary of Highways. Today's story deals with the Capital City and the region surrounding it.

HARRISBURG, Apr. 23.—A visit to the State Capitol and the surrounding countryside during early spring provides an interesting trip, both from an educational and scenic standpoint.

The magnificent Capitol group, which houses the Government of the Commonwealth, attracts thousands of visitors, and in increasing numbers, pupils of Pennsylvania schools are making the State Capitol a part of their annual spring tour.

A profitable day can be spent by the tourist in a visit to Capitol Hill alone. Of this group of buildings, including the main Capitol, the State Museum and Library, the North and South Office buildings, a native of Pennsylvania can well feel proud.

Both from an architectural and utilitarian standpoint, the State buildings are splendid examples of the building art.

The State Museum is perhaps the most interesting building in any capital city and houses a treasure-trove of historic and artistic memorabilia. The Museum is open to visitors on Sunday afternoon from one to four and on week days from eight-thirty until five, with guides on duty to explain the various exhibits.

The City of Harrisburg and the Capitol buildings are but part of the Central Pennsylvania scene, however, and on every side will be found panoramic loveliness surrounding the capital city.

No less than eight excellent roads lead to the gates of the capital city and the visitor's trip to Harrisburg is hardly complete until the environs for thirty miles about are explored.

Lancaster, one of the State's most historic cities, is but an hour's drive from Harrisburg. On market day it is as colorful as any Far East travel scene and yet as much of Pennsylvania as the Capitol. Lancaster is set in a farming area dotted with busy towns, and farms which have gained world-fame for fertility and productivity.

Bordering U. S. Route No. 422 is found the Lebanon Valley where a Pennsylvania German atmosphere prevails. A dozen miles from Harrisburg, however, a note of modernity blends with the rural scene as the model town of Hershey is reached, a twentieth-century marvel of individualism and community enterprise.

SMALL BOY HURT WHEN KNOCKED DOWN BY AUTO

Edward Gross, Jr., 3, Suffered Contusions of the Head

TREATED AT HOSPITAL

A boy of three years was struck by an automobile on Newportville Road yesterday afternoon, when according to Joseph Seaders, Bristol Township constable, he ran across the road-way in front of the machine.

The injured is Edward Gross, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gross, Newportville Road.

It is stated that the lad was called by two playmates who were on the opposite side of the thoroughfare, and that in answering the summons he was hit by the sedan operated by John Shaw, 2261 N. Lawrence street, Philadelphia. The boy is said to have been knocked down by the bumper, but the wheels did not pass over him. It is presumed that his injuries, contusions of the right side of the head, were sustained when he attempted to arise and struck the underpart of the car. He also had scratches on the right leg, and was treated at Harriman Hospital. Later he was taken to his home, but will be given another examination at the hospital today.

Shaw was arrested by Constable Seaders who was a witness to the accident, and will be given a hearing Friday evening at seven before justice of the peace James Laughlin.

OPPOSE DAMMING RIVER FOR POWER PURPOSES

Mayor Stockham, Morrisville, Says "Firm" May Only Be "Front"

FEARS A MONOPOLY

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 23.—Fear that privately owned public utilities are attempting to block a possible future Government power program on the Delaware River was expressed yesterday at a hearing on a proposed $29,600,000 power project for the upper part of the stream.

Opposition to construction of three large dams by the newly formed Electric Power Company of New Jersey was voiced by Mayor J. Hampton Moore, of Philadelphia, and Mayor Thomas F. Stockham, of Morrisville, on the grounds the firm may be merely a "front" for Government obstructionists.

Asserting no one knows the identities of the backers of the new concern, Stockham told Lieutenant Colonel John H. Lee, U. S. district engineer in charge of the hearing:

"Perhaps private utilities seek to block the Government in future development. This mysterious appearance should be held in abeyance and investigated before the rights of the Government are given away. Study the nature of these applicants and find out who they represent."

Mayor Moore also declared the power scheme "would seriously affect" Philadelphia's water supply.

Colonel Lee asked for witnesses in support of the proposal, which calls for construction of dams and hydro-electric plants between Easton and Port Jervis, N. Y., but none appeared.

William H. Speer, of Newark, N. J., attorney for the Public Service Electric & Gas Company, of New Jersey, said Hugo A. Spalinski, the applicant for the project permit, was "without entirely financial responsibility." He called the plan "a promotion project."

The incorporators are H. A. Spalinski, of 18 Cain avenue; Frank Kron, of 1072 South Broad street, and Mrs. Dolores M. Sica, 318 South Clinton avenue, all of Trenton.

HARRISBURG, Apr. 23.—Bills to prohibit the construction of power dams on the Delaware River and to appropriate water of the stream for public water supply purposes were introduced tonight by the Administration of Governor Earle.

"Specifically, the bills are designed to prevent 'power grabs,'" said Attorney General Margiotti.

One bill prohibits the construction of dams in that portion of the river within Pennsylvania and the second appropriates 750,000,000 gallons of water daily from the stream and its tributaries, north of Easton, for the benefit of municipalities or others authorized to supply water for domestic use or public water supply purposes.

Search for Other Possible Victims

Lancaster, Apr. 23.—Satisfied they have solved the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Gladys Lawson, 26, of Calvert, State police and other investigators today continued their search of the home of Dr. H. C. Zimmerly, Mechanics Grove, for further possible finds.

Bones uncovered at the elderly physician's home were identified by an anatomist as those of Mrs. Lawson, last seen on March 13th after allegedly undergoing an illegal operation at the hands of Dr. Zimmerly. Almost enough human bones, badly burned, were found on the farm to outline a skeleton, according to police. State police theorized that Dr. Zimmerly, held under $10,000 bail on narcotic and illegal operations charges, dissected Mrs. Lawson's body and disposed of the remains in his furnace.

Solution of the woman's disappearance, police pointed out, will not alter the prosecution of the physician as there was nothing in the case to indicate murder. He will probably be tried in June.

Expect Long to Renew "Feud"

Washington, D. C., Apr. 23.—With the colorful Senator, Huey P. Long, Louisiana's Kingfish, ready to renew his attacks on the administration's relief policy, the Senate today sought to dispose of the Bankhead Farm Home Loan Bill, before tackling the highly controversial anti-lynching issue.

Long was expected to renew his latest feud with Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and Secretary of the Interior Harry Ickes. He charged the two administration officials, with President Roosevelt's advice and consent, were turning the expenditures of Federal relief funds in Louisiana over to a "group of thieves and crooks."

HULMEVILLE STUDENTS HOPE TO KEEP RECORD

Won First Place Two Seasons, Second Last Spring At County Seat

ARE NOW IN PRACTICE

HULMEVILLE, Apr. 23.—Hulmeville-Middletown public school athletes are hoping to keep up their good records in the Bucks County Interscholastic track and field meet this year.

The boys and girls who attend the school in this borough are proud of their records for the past few years in this meet, and are practicing faithfully this Spring. In 1931 they won third place in Class D; in 1932, first place; again in 1933 captured first honors, and last Spring secured second place.

Last year Anna Biedka was one of Hulmeville-Middletown school's star athletes, placing first in the 50-yard dash and standing broad jump, and second in the basketball and baseball throw. Ethel Vornhold won second place in the standing broad jump; Aldridge Everitt was first in high jump; and Harold Benner fifth in the high jump. All of these pupils are lost to this school this year, they now being enrolled at Langhorne-Middletown high school.

There are no pupils remaining from last year's meet who will represent Hulmeville-Middletown school next month, and there are but 14 in the eighth grade, but still the instructors and students are optimistic.

Jumps, dashes and ball-throws are now being practiced under guidance of Miss Ann MacCorkle and principal Lynn Schatzer.

Among the possibilities on the lists of Miss MacCorkle and Mr. Schatzer are the following, who are endeavoring to make good for the entry in the county meet:

Girls—Baseball throw, Harriet Bunting, Anna VanVossen; basketball throw, Harriet Bunting, Laura Harrison; running, Laura Harrison, Harriet Bunting, Betty Everitt, Anna VanVossen, Lena Pishl; broad jump, Betty Everitt, Anna VanVossen, Harriet Bunting.

700 PARTICIPATE IN PROCESSION OF ST. ANN'S CHURCH

"Our Lady of Grace" Celebration Occurs Here for First Time

STUDENTS ALSO MARCH

Statue of "Our Lady of Grace" Carried by Committee of Six

Hundreds of parishioners and friends of St. Ann's Catholic Church joined in the celebration of "Our Lady of Grace" this morning, the affair being marked by a high mass at 10 o'clock, followed by a procession through the Italian residential section of the borough. It is estimated that at least 700 participated in the procession, and the church was filled to capacity for the mass.

The Rev. Father Rocca delivered the sermon, and was assisted in the mass by the Rev. Fathers Romagno and Albert.

This is the first time that the celebration of "Our Lady of Grace" has occurred in this borough, the festivity having been held for years by communicants of the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Philadelphia, which was closed last year. The celebration was sponsored by communicants who had come originally from the Province of Spezzano, Italy, and a similar group sponsored the affair here. There are here approximately 100 families who came from this province, and this group which desired to continue the celebration, was joined by others affiliated with St. Ann's parish, and friends from the Philadelphia section.

Immediately following the mass the procession formed along the streets in the vicinity of the church. At the head of the procession were 500 children from St. Ann's parochial school. These were followed by 16 pages garbed in white costumes featuring mantles, and each carried a sword. Fourteen altar boys followed the pages, and next in the procession were the three priests. The statue of "Our Lady of Grace" was carried upon the shoulders of a committee of six men comprising Louis Luce, Louis Conti, Frank Delia, Dominick Fields, Genera Ferraro, Gaetano Ruffalo. The congregation followed.

A band from Philadelphia followed the school children, and the route of march was from the church, down Penn street, to Franklin, Wood, Lafayette, Washington, and the highway to the church.

DROUGHT IN THE WEST

If the facts as reported from Kansas City are even an approximately correct picture of the great eight-state dust storm, the far-flung farm acres of the Midwest and Southwest are experiencing in mid-April, 1935, as severe a drought as they experienced at any time in 1934. Because, perhaps, of accumulated effects, conditions appear to be even worse in the states named—Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado and parts of New Mexico, Iowa, Nebraska, Texas and Missouri.

"Grimy wagons and motor cars," one reads, "carried scores of families out of Northwestern Oklahoma in full flight from the dust storm among the most severe of a devastating series." According to R. I. Throckmorton, head of the Kansas City's College's department of agronomy, rain now would be too late to check devastation in the drought-ridden sector, a major source of the nation's wheat.

It is easy enough, now that wheat farms of the Great Plains country are being whirled away in dust to recall the prophecies of the old cattlemen that no good would come from giving to the plow the great pasture lands which God had designed for buffaloes and cattle. Doubtless the cattlemen were expressing resentment at the invasion of their grazing grounds rather than manifesting any unusual qualms as conservationists or diviners of the future. But however that may be, the problem which they forecast has come about.

Canada has a comparable problem in that section of its great wheat fields that formerly were grazing lands.

SMILE, LADIES, SMILE!

A New York plastic surgeon says women who refrain from smiling because they believe it will cause wrinkles are on the wrong track. The stretch given the skin in the process of smiling, he says, actually serves to preserve its elasticity and prevent wrinkles.

Whether there is anything to this theory or not, we are unable to say. But we have no hesitation whatever in agreeing with the proposition that any woman who refrains from smiling for cosmetic reasons is doing herself, wrinkles or no, a positive disservice.

The object of avoiding wrinkles, we presume, is to maintain as long as possible the semblance of youth. Yet one of the best characteristics of youth, just as much as the possession of a smooth skin, is a smiling countenance. Youth with what is known colloquially but graphically, as a dead pan is not attractive youth and, no matter what your age or skin condition, is not worth having, from a beauty standpoint.

As a matter of fact, we have seen young people—young in years, we mean—whose faces, already marked with laughter wrinkles, were much more attractive than those of their less joyous or more phlegmatic contemporaries. And the same goes for older people. We have yet to see a face, of any age or sex, that was not more attractive for the laughter wrinkles on it. For other wrinkles, we hold no brief.

The candy phonograph record—an English invention—sounds like a boon to the many music-lovers who can't stomach the modern stuff.

Some consider that life is one tax payment after another.

in Philadelphia. Hendricks had planned to move into his home this week, but will not be able to do so.

He went to the house and watched it, entering it one night last week with his shoes in his hands to avoid being heard. He surprised two boys in the house: Lawrence George, Jr., and Robert Busch. Hendricks collared the pair, and the investigation started.

The magistrate did not go into a formal hearing in the case. There was no evidence taken to indicate the extent of each boy's guilt, or to determine which did the drinking. It is said that none has denied being in the Hendricks home.

"THE COLD FINGER CURSE"

by EDWIN DIAL TORGERSON

SYNOPSIS

During a party at her home, wealthy Mrs. Violet Elderbank is murdered and her jewels stolen. Among the guests were June and Jimmy Kirkman, her neighbors, and their tenants, St. Gregory Valcour, pseudo artist, Glenn Thurber, a newspaper reporter and dignified Douglas W. Coulter, a statistical expert. Marjorie Clark, Thurber's fiancée, and Roger Duane, a specialty dancer, are also present. The crime occurred while the house was in darkness and drums were beating for Roger's Zulu dance. Violet had been summoned to a private telephone in her bedroom. Her maid, Elsie, found her chloroformed and gagged. About that time, Price Merriam, Violet's secretary and companion, who operated the lights for Roger's dance, had difficulty in turning them on after having put them out for Roger's entrance. Thurber disappeared during the performance to make a telephone call next door. Valcour had gone there to get some of his paintings for Violet. Elsie the maid claims she was busy in the kitchen when the telephone rang, but both Merriam and Cupples, the butler, state she was not there. According to Cupples the call was from the telephone office stating it had a message from Montreal for Mrs. Elderbank. A check-up reveals there was no such call but that Glenn Thurber telephoned at 12:21. Thurber emphatically denies this. As he is about to let Darden into his room, Thurber discovers his key is missing. The reporter's fingerprints are found on Mrs. Elderbank's phone. Valcour claims that while he was in his studio getting the pictures, he saw Thurber come in, but did not see him go out again, nor did he hear Thurber telephoning. Roger tells the police he was putting the finishing touches to his make-up between 12:25 and 12:45 P. M., the time the murder was committed. A black smudge as of burnt cork is found on Violet's bedclothes. A tracer corroborates Thurber's statement that he telephoned his office from the public telephone in the Kirkman house. Darden examines Merriam's apartment a few doors away from the Elderbank residence.

CHAPTER XVII

Darden mounted the steps to the skylight and examined the lock. It was merely a sturdy latch that could be opened only from the inside. "Any signs of anything?" asked Merriam anxiously. "Oh, I can't tell," said Darden, descending. "I haven't the proper equipment. But I want to ask you a favor, Mr. Merriam. I want your finger-print man to go over this place thoroughly, just as a precaution, to-morrow, and I'd rather you didn't stay here to-night. I don't want to take any chances of missing things up. Go to a hotel, will you?" "Why, certainly," agreed Merriam, but not with great alacrity. "You don't suppose anybody could have come through here to-night, do you—or from the roof?" Darden looked at him keenly. "I don't know. Why?" "I lost one of the keys to my apartment the other day—went off and left it in the lock, you know, as one sometimes does. And when I returned it was gone." "Hm! Don't know who might have got it, eh? You'd better change your lock."

Darden looked around with apparent casualness. He thrust his head through a rear window and looked for fire-escapes. There were none. He looked toward the Elderbank house, three doors away, which was still lighter brilliantly. He withdrew his head and thrust it back again, attracted by something that had almost escaped his notice. He flashed his light on it.

Looped tightly around the hook on the side of the window nearest the Elderbank house was the end of a stout cord, which dangled down indefinitely in the darkness.

Darden reached for it and pulled it in. He kept pulling, and his amazement grew. The cord, it appeared, was seventy or eighty feet long.

"What the devil!" exclaimed Darden.

"Where on earth did you get that from?" gasped Merriam.

"It's a heavy fishing line—trout line, I guess you'd call it," commented Darden. "What have you been using it for?"

"Me? Why, I haven't used it for anything!" cried Merriam irritably. "I never saw it before. Why on earth should I have a fishing line dangling out into the court?"

"A whole ball of cord, you'd better say."

Darden drew in the end of the line, the bulk of it coiling in loops at his feet. He fingered it gingerly.

There were twists and curls near the free end of the line which seemed to indicate that it had been strongly knotted, then untied, and the cord was stiff enough to retain partly these convolutions. Evidently something had been tied on the end of it, and then untied.

"Now I know you don't sleep here to-night," said the Sergeant coolly. "Nobody sleeps here but a policeman—and he'd better keep awake!"

Inspector McNairy of the homicide bureau visited the scene of the crime on the following morning, which was Tuesday, September the eighth. Sergeant Darden, keen and tireless as ever after a few hours of sleep, reviewed minutely for his superior the developments of the night.

McNairy was a heavily built, mustached individual with steady gray eyes and a dominating solidity of demeanor. He was apparently good-humored, but there was a granite back-wall behind his jovialness. One felt he was a man who had never been bullied and seldom deceived. He had no frills or mannerisms. He had muscled his way up, as they said in the underworld, from a patrolman's post. Murders were his specialty, and he had investigated hundreds of them.

He classified his murder instinctively as he viewed the matrix of the crime. There were axe murders, knife murders, club murders, stranglings, all the work of distinctive varieties of killers. There were murders for profit, for revenge, for concealment; ordinary assassinations by thieves and gunmen, poison conspiracies of the warped though cultivated mind. But the Elderbank did not fall easily into any of these general categories. It was a high-powered jewel theft with accidental murder, the Inspector told himself, but it was not at all what it had seemed at first sight—the work of ordinary "provers." To prove, in the argot of the underworld, is to burglar.

McNairy absorbed the salient aspects of the case without comment. A daylight investigation of the roofs had uncovered only one additional clue, if it could be called a clue. It was a pencil, a soft pencil of heavy lead, round, of varnished cedar, without an eraser. Evidently it had been sharpened but once, and then with a sure-edged knife. The point had been broken off. The pencil had been found on the roof of Jimmy Kirkman's house, adjoining Mrs. Elderbank's. It had lain in the rain all night and offered no possibility of finger-prints.

McNairy had pencil experts with him. He did not need a staff of omniscient specialists in the homicide bureau, because there was available to him at all times, in technical matters, the best talent and the most advanced thought that the world's greatest city afforded. He instructed Darden to send a man with the pencil to its manufacturers and distributors, to ascertain if possible when it was made, the lot in which it was shipped, the special uses to which extra-soft pencils of this variety were put. Similar inquiries were being made on the subject of the cord found dangling from the window of Price Merriam's apartment.

The Inspector ordered Merriam and Roger Duane detained at headquarters for questioning. The colored maid's roving friend, Johnny Hankins, who had drifted into his Harlem lodgings at four o'clock with a bulging wad of one dollar bills in his pocket, also was being detained. He admitted not without pride that the one dollar bills had been garnered in a crap game, in which he had started with only five dollars. It was not long after a siege of very rough questioning, however, that he confessed having dropped by Mrs. Elderbank's house the night before to borrow that basic five dollars from his lady friend, Elsie Seever.

Mrs. Elderbank's chauffeur, Cliff Spencer, was another person questioned. He had been excused from duty late the previous afternoon and had spent the night with relatives in a distant Long Island town. His alibi was unassailable, and he could tell the police nothing of value.

The finger-print expert, Captain Nolley, could uncover nothing useful in his examination of Price Merriam's apartment. The stairs to the roof looked as though they had been wiped clean, he reported, and the same was true of the window sill near which the cord had been suspended. Whether this careful cleansing had been done by the industrious housemaid or other persons, it could not be established. Cunning criminals, Nobley observed, were well versed in this trick, and cunning criminals had robbed and killed Violet Elderbank.

Detectives questioned the housemaid, the girl who helped her, and every tenant of the house Merriam lived in, and here there was developed one lead of possible promise. The housemaid, Mrs. Ellison, who lived in the basement, also served as superintendent of the small house. Two weeks ago she had rented a two-room apartment on the second floor to a man whom she had seldom seen since. Mrs. Ellison was near-sighted, and people came and went with their own keys, so this was not remarkable. The man had given the name of Garvice. He had furnished references, but Mrs. Ellison had lost them, which was not of consequence because Mr. Garvice had paid two months' rent in advance for his furnished flat.

What did Mr. Garvice look like? Why, he was of medium build, eyes either brown or gray, nose neither straight nor pug, just sort of in-between. Plain-faced, if Mrs. Ellison remembered right, seemed sort of nervous. She'd know him if she saw him again, but that was as near as she could describe him. She did not know whether he looked exactly prosperous or rather shabby.

Detectives entering the apartment of Mr. Garvice could not find a trace of him—no letters, no clothing, not even a cigarette butt.

The further examination of Merriam, Duane, Glenn Thurber and the negro Johnny Hankins at headquarters likewise availed nothing, though the examination was tedious and turbulent.

No trace of stolen jewelry or clothing had been found at Hankins' place of abode. His story of the crap game was verified, his confessions in that sport agreeing that Johnny had shown up shortly before one o'clock and had displayed five dollars as his sole preliminary capital. The crap game had been held at a place on West Fifty-ninth Street. Detectives traced the five dollar bill (which Johnny had on him, having cleared out the game) to the branch bank where Mrs. Elderbank had secured it on the previous Saturday, so that it evidently had been paid to Elsie Seever in wages, and her story seemed substantiated.

WHAT KIND DID YOU GET?

WHEN Mrs. Brown tells Mrs. Smith about the new car, Mrs. Smith is pretty sure to ask, in genuine, friendly interest, "What kind did you get?" With a new piano, a hot-water heater, or a package of pastry flour, it's likely to be the same . . . For names mean something to every wise woman.

The name of any commercial product is of interest only because its maker has made it mean something . . . has made it stand for definite qualities in the public mind. And that very fact provides one of the greatest helps to better living. If you're a regular reader of advertising, you know what you are getting—and you get your money's worth.

gates. Beyond are York County's hills, framed in the fissure carved by the river through rocky mountain walls. In mid-foreground is the famous stone arch bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad, long holder of the world's record for its type.

Westward from the capital city lies Carlisle on U. S. Route No. 11. This famous town, the seat of Cumberland County, abounds in reminders of the early history of the Nation. It was here that George Washington, then a colonel, met and conferred with General Forbes on plans for the campaign against Fort Pitt, and the construction of a military road which later was to be the famous Lincoln Highway.

Carlisle is steeped in traditions of the Civil War, as it played unwilling host to Confederate forces for many months.

Nearby Carlisle is historic Pine Grove Furnace, where materials for Colonial cannons were produced.

A two-hour circle jaunt from Harrisburg leads north to Fort Hunter, famous in Indian days; thence east through Stony Creek Valley to Manada Gap and Indiantown Gap. Here is the military reservation where 12,000 men of Pennsylvania's Twenty-eighth Division encamp each summer. Return to the capital city can be made on U. S. Route No. 22 to Reservoir Hill where a splendid view of the city and environs is offered.

To complete the exploration of the capital region, one may travel south on U. S. Route No. 111 into York County, another fertile and picturesque region, worth visiting in early spring or at any time.

The Bureau of Publicity and Information of the Pennsylvania

Department of Highways will be pleased to map out itineraries from any section of Pennsylvania to Harrisburg and environs. A postal card request will receive prompt attention.

BOWLING LEAGUES ARE NEAR END OF SEASON

With the exception of a few postponed games to be played this week, the Bristol, American and National bowling leagues have completed one of the most successful seasons since the organization of the Bristol Bowling Association.

Each league comprised six teams and bowled two rounds of 45 games each.

The National League, which was organized at the beginning of the season presented the fans with the most interesting competition, the winner of either half was undecided until the last week, in fact the second half schedule ended in a tie between K. of C. and Rohm & Haas. This tie will be rolled off this week, and the winner will play Asco, the first half winners, for the championship of that circuit.

The Harriman team of the American League won both halves, therefore are undisputed champions of that circuit.

In the Bristol League, Harriman won the first half and Rohm & Haas the second. Tomorrow evening at 7:30, these teams will face each other for a four game match to decide the championship. The best of five points to decide the winner, one point being awarded for each game won and a point for highest total pins for the match.

Tuesday evening of next week, a special meeting will be held at the Recreation Center, at 8 p. m., of all representatives of teams in each league. At this meeting the awards for all teams and individuals will be announced.

Arrangements will also be made for the annual Bowlers' Night when refreshments will be served and prizes awarded.

YOUTH WEEK SCHEDULE OPENS HERE THURSDAY

David Landreth, chairman of the Youth Week Baseball Committee, today announces that the baseball games will commence on Thursday of this week. There will be two divisions. The Junior divisions includes all boys who have not reached their 13th birthday by July 1 while those over 13 are placed in the senior division.

The schedule for Thursday in the junior class is as follows: First Ward vs. Third Ward, Sullivan's field; Second Ward vs. Crocydon, at Crocydon; Fourth Ward vs. Edgely, at Edgely; Fifth Ward vs. Sixth Ward at Leed-on's.

On Friday, the senior class will begin with the same schedule effective.

LOWER BUCKS LEAGUE TO MEET

There will be a meeting of the Lower Bucks County Baseball League tonight in the Newportville Fire House at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

HORSE LOVERS WILL COMPETE FOR TROPHY

A large and beautifully ornated Challenge trophy will be given by the "Delaware Valley Horse Show Association," organized by Bucks County horsemen, to the riding club winning the most points in a series of horse shows this spring; the first of which will be at Yardley, April 28.

The association was first conceived and drawn up by the New Hope Riding Club, managed by George H. Ely, situated two miles south of New Hope on the River road. The riding clubs of Yardley, Bristol and 112th Field Artillery joined in the order named.

The purpose of the association is to stir up a lasting interest for the coming year among the clubs, and to interest the public in riding.

The Challenge trophy will be competed for at a show on the home grounds of each club. The first show will be at Yardley, where the club winning this class will get permanent possession of a replica in miniature of the trophy, and possession of the trophy, with their names and date of winning thereon engraved, until they lose it at a following show. Other classes of riding and jumping will be added to make a well balanced show.

Each club has the privilege of designating the course and kind of event in which the clubs shall compete. The plan of scoring is that each club may enter as many horses as they like, but the three highest contestants only will count for the club as a unit. Therefore, each club will have from first to fourth place in the final score at each show, and the ultimate winner at the end of the season is the one amassing the most points. This club gets permanent possession of the trophy.

The dates taken by the clubs for their shows are: Yardley, April 28; Bristol, May 5, and New Hope, June 8. The event chosen by Yardley and New Hope clubs is a team course, in which teams of three jumpers will ride over a half mile course of various types of jumps, triple bars, ditches, Irish bank, etc.

Admits Marriage to Mae West

New York City, Apr. 23.—The New York Evening Journal in a copyrighted story today, said that an old time trouper had admitted marrying Mae West, April 11, 1911, in Milwaukee.

"The dance man," the story said, "is Frank Wallace, 42, of the team of Wallace and Lamay, under the management of Jack Cornell of the Strand Building and he says he is still in love with LaBelle West," the story continued.

"What a girl, what a girl," said Wallace. "What do I think of her?" he repeated. "If I had the money I would still be sending her flowers every week. There is still a soft spot in my heart for Mae, though I suppose she has forgotten her old partner and husband."

Wallace related, the Journal said, of a kiddish romance that he said culminated in a marriage to Mae West, winding up in a sudden divorce in 1916 or 17. "Mae and I got along very well. We were deeply in love, at least I was and still am, but she was kept traveling. We were only kids. I was a dance man. She liked to sing and dance. I liked Broadway, she liked to travel and they kept her going, always breaking in new acts. She got better prospects and we just drifted apart. There was no part for me and I suppose there still is not."

"Russian Air Force Constitutes Danger"

With a nucleus of 4300 planes and the promise of more than 10,000 within a few years, the gigantic air force of Soviet Russia "constitutes a danger for the entire world," Lt. Colonel Baron Von Buelow, member of the Reichswehr Ministry, charged today.

In an official statement, Von Buelow set forth details of Russia's air strength never revealed before.

"Soviet Russia's air force," he declared, "represents the most efficient instrument for the Third International to carry out its ultimate aim to overthrow the governments of all countries and spread world revolution to the remotest corners of the globe."

"While the Russian government has spread an almost impenetrable field in airforce, reliable information estimates that the present strength at 70 flight squadrons and 90 independent squadrons, with a total of 4300 machines. Of this number, 3200 comprise the first line, ready for immediate action and 1100 comprise the second line or war planes."

"During the second five-year plan, the number of planes was to be increased to 5000. The same information indicates the number may already have been done."

SHOW SPOILED

ORLEANS, Ind. — (INS) — On the demand of citizens the electric fire siren that signals the location of the fire will be used again after several years' silence. Use of the siren was stopped because so many persons beat the department to the fires that it was difficult to get the fire-fighting apparatus near the blaze.

Married or Not?

Can the Mae West, whom records show was married to Frank Wallace at Milwaukee, Wis., in 1911, by the Mae West of movie fame? Although a Frank Wallace played with her in Broadway show, Mae says from Hollywood she never heard of the "guy."

New California Comet

By BURNLEY

Following in the footsteps of Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs is the latest California net prodigy, Miss Jane Sharp of Pasadena, who at present holds the national indoor tennis crown and is a sure bet to hold down a place on the 1935 Wightman Cup team.

Miss Sharp's rise to court prominence has been meteoric. Almost unknown a little more than a year ago, the fair Californian is now accepted as one of our leading feminine net stars, who may well be a definite threat to Helen Jacobs' supremacy before another twelve months passes by.

One of the principal reasons for Jane's brilliant court successes is her fine backhand. This stroke is usually the weak spot in most girls' tennis armor, but Miss Sharp's backhand is faultless. She possesses everything in the way of strokes, is a cool and crafty net strategist, and in polishing off her winning shots she whangs the pellet as hard as any man.

The Pasadena phenom is remarkably graceful in action, a "picture player" without any of that awkwardness shown by so many athletic girls. Jane has plenty of speed also, and is a remarkably able court coverer. A real stylist, she possesses uncommon accuracy and mixes her shots with all the skill of a baseball pitcher's change of pace.

In the finals of the National Indoor tourney at New York, Miss Sharp gave one of the classiest exhibitions of sustained tennis skill ever seen on the indoor courts.

Veteran tennis critics were unanimous in their opinion that she seems certainly destined for an illustrious tennis career. The only thing that may prevent her reaching the top is the possibility that she may not devote as much time to tennis after this year, since she expects to get married next fall.

It is to be hoped that Miss Sharp continues to make competitive tennis her career, for the game certainly needs some good women players to provide a little competition for Helen Jacobs and Dorothy Round. Jane has ability and color galore, and will be one of the best drawing cards in the sport if she sticks to her tennis knitting.
